NY State's highest court rejects appeal of former Lake George Watershed Coalition's convictions

David Decker expected to surrender for sentence on November 17

WARREN COUNTY, NY -- Warren County District Attorney Jason Carusone announced today that the New York State Court of Appeals has declined to hear the appeal of David J. Decker, the former director of the Lake George Watershed Coalition who was convicted of stealing hundreds of thousands of dollars of public funds while in charge of local environmental projects.

In a decision released this week, the Court of Appeals, New York State's highest court, declined to review the mid-level appeals court's ruling from July 2023 that affirmed Decker's convictions and sentence.

The Appellate Division 3rd Department previously upheld the decision of a Warren County jury that convicted Decker in March 2020 after a month-long trial. The Appellate Division found that that trial evidence supported David Decker's convictions for grand larceny and fraud as well as false filings relating to his tax returns. That decision held that there were no grounds to overturn his convictions or sentence.

At trial the Warren County District Attorney's Office presented evidence that showed he stole hundreds of thousands of dollars in NY State and federal grant funds while overseeing environmental projects in the Lake George region.

Decker, a resident of Burnt Hills, was refusing to pay local municipalities, not-for-profit organizations, and businesses by misleading these entities into believing that grant funds had not yet been received when in fact they had been diverted into his personal accounts.

The evidence also showed that Decker failed to report thousands of dollars of income, including funds he obtained and funneled through a youth basketball tournament scheme.

District Attorney Carusone said: "Despite his convictions and sentence the defendant has remained at liberty pending the appeals process. Now, the decision of the Court of Appeals means the defendant's sentence will begin, including the requirement that he pay restitution to the victims. He will be directed to surrender himself to begin serving the sentence that was imposed for his betrayals of the public trust. As District Attorney for Warren County I am thankful for the tireless work of those who investigated and prosecuted this lengthy and complicated case. I commend the Warren County Sheriff's Office, New York State Office of the State Comptroller, and the New York State Department of Taxation and Finance for their efforts to seek justice. I am particularly thankful to Assistant District Attorney Ben Smith and Acting Assistant District Attorney Christine Stevens for the tireless work they put into presenting this complex case to the jury. Finally, I am grateful for the efforts of Assistant District Attorney Bob McCarty who reviewed thousands of pages of transcripts so that he could successfully respond to the defendant's appeals."

It is expected that the defendant will be required to appear at the Warren County Court on November 17th to begin his sentence.

Appeals court upholds convictions in Lake George fraud case

Warren County District Attorney Jason Carusone announced today that the Appellate Division, Third Department of NY Supreme Court has upheld the felony theft and fraud convictions of David Decker, former director of the Lake George Watershed Coalition, in a unanimous, 19-page decision.

The appeals court affirmed that trial evidence supported David Decker's convictions for grand larceny and fraud and that there were no technical errors made during his month-long trial. The Court also upheld the 8- to 24-year state prison sentence imposed by then-Warren County Judge Hon. John S. Hall Jr.

Decker, of Burnt Hills, was found guilty of six felonies, including Grand Larceny in the Second Degree and Scheme to Defraud in the First Degree, by a Warren County jury after the Warren County District Attorney's Office presented evidence that showed he stole hundreds of thousands of dollars in NY State and federal grant funds while overseeing environmental projects in the Lake George region. When questions were raised about nonpayment to local municipalities, not for profits, and businesses, David Decker misled these entities into believing that grant funds had not yet been received when in fact they had been diverted into his personal accounts. The appeals court also upheld convictions for the false filing of New York

State tax returns where David Decker failed to report hundreds of thousands of dollars of income, including funds he obtained and funneled through youth basketball tournaments.

Warren County District Attorney Jason Carusone said: “We are gratified that the Appellate Division upheld all of the convictions and found there was sufficient evidence that the defendant stole public funds, and engaged in a scheme to defraud the people of Warren County.”

District Attorney Carusone also praised the tireless efforts of prosecutors who worked on the trial, appellate brief, and oral argument, saying: “Assistant District Attorneys Benjamin Smith and Robert McCarty, as well as Acting Assistant District Attorney Christine Stevens from the Tax Department, put countless hours into this complicated case, and we are glad to see that their hard work has been affirmed by the Appellate Division.”

Carusone went on to thank the Warren County Sheriff’s Office, Office of the New York State Comptroller and New York State Department of Taxation and Finance for the many months spent investigating these crimes.

Decker has been free since the date of his conviction pending the decision on his appeal. It is anticipated he will return to Warren County Court on a future date to begin serving his sentence.
